

Blog for Discerning Travelers
Wed, Oct 29, 2008

The charming El Corazon de Sante Fe private residence club in Santa Fe, New Mexico

Club membership has truly proven to be a smart way to own an exclusive, luxury vacation home without the added hassle of maintenance costs and upkeep of a second home. In North America, buyers are flocking to the southwestern hot spot, Santa Fe to invest in the only residence club in the area, El Corazon de Santa Fe.

This charming private residence club is located, as its name suggests, in the heart of Santa Fe downtown area, near the city's famous Plaza, innumerable chic boutiques and shops, over 200 art galleries, museums and a fine collection of stylish restaurants.

El Corazon and architect Jeff Seres of Studio Southwest Architects were recently honored with the American Institute of Architects Award of Merit. The statewide competition recognizes distinguished architectural achievements by New Mexico architects. The private residence club exudes quintessential Southwestern charm with adobe architecture accented by local art and décor.

El Corazon residence club members own deeded real estate for unlimited vacations without the responsibility of repairs, upkeep, security, cleaning and other hassles of wholly-owning second homes. Owners also enjoy luxury amenities and services including spa benefits at Las Posada's Rock Resort Spa, golf membership benefits at Towa Golf Resort, private tours at the Georgia O'Keefe museum, pre-arrival grocery shopping and an on-site concierge.

For more information, please visit the El Corazon de Santa Fe profile page. Photo courtesy of El Corazon de Santa Fe.